The Tulalip Tribes Charitable Contributions gift of [REDACTED] assisted Christian Health Care Center in Lynden, Washington, in advancing toward its goal of updating critical IT and telephone systems that are obsolete and at risk of ceasing at any moment.

CHCC operates the only locally owned not-for-profit skilled nursing facility in Whatcom County, currently providing an essential service to approximately 100 older adults who need long-term care and short-term therapeutic rehabilitation services.

Such a cessation would impact our ability to receive, review and enter health care data. It would threaten our facility's ability to provide services to our residents and could require an immediate transfer of the residents to other facilities, likely not in this area. A communications system failure would also impact approximately 200 people who work at CHCC, as they would likely be without employment.

The cost is high, so fundraising for our IT and telephone system upgrade will continue in the months ahead. For that reason, we do not have photos to share currently.

We express our gratitude to Tulalip Tribes for its generous support.

Sincerely,

Tonja Myers, Executive Director
Christian Health Care Center
